Most days, the idea of space makes me feel
small.

A piece of cosmic dust floating through an infinite expanse.

But some days, I feel entire Universes vibrating
in every atom of my being.

A multitude of worlds in the tip of my finger,
vast beyond my own comprehension.

The dance of electrons--like planets and stars-- seemingly random yet perfectly choreographed.

A buzzing of controlled chaos.

Like the Universe, I am more complex than the summation of my deceptively simple particles
of construction.

Like the Universe I am simultaneously never ending and one of many.
