The Daggally Doo's a queer little chap,
Of the "what-you-may-call'ems" kind,
With a tail like a rope, and a funny white cap,
And ears that hang down behind.

He lives in a hole in the side of a hill,
Where the sunshine never gets in,
And he eats little boys and girls,
That are foolish enough to grin.

So beware of the Daggally Doo,
If you meet him at night,
For he'll snatch you away before you know,
And you'll never see daylight again.
