Megan Rix was born into a world of privilege. Her father was a wealthy businessman, and her mother was a socialite. But Megan was always a rebel. She didn't fit in with the other girls at her exclusive private school. She was more interested in rock 'n' roll than debutante balls.

When she was 15 years old, Megan met Cherie Currie. Currie was the lead singer of the all-girl rock band The Runaways. Megan was immediately drawn to Currie's rebellious spirit. She quit school and joined The Runaways.

The Runaways were one of the most successful all-girl rock bands of the 1970s. They released four albums and toured the world. Their music was a mix of hard rock and punk. They were known for their rebellious image and their outspoken lyrics.

Megan was a talented guitarist. She quickly became one of the most popular members of The Runaways. She was known for her long, flowing blonde hair and her aggressive playing style.

But The Runaways' success came at a price. The band members were constantly on the road. They were addicted to drugs and alcohol. And they were constantly fighting with each other.

In 1979, The Runaways broke up. Megan was devastated. She didn't know what to do with her life.

For the next few years, Megan struggled with addiction and depression. She was in and out of rehab. She even attempted suicide.

But in 1984, Megan found redemption. She became a born-again Christian. She got sober and started a new life.

Megan has been sober for over 30 years. She is now a successful businesswoman and a motivational speaker. She travels the world sharing her story of addiction and redemption.

Megan Rix is a true survivor. She has overcome addiction, depression, and suicide. She is a role model for anyone who is struggling with life's challenges.
